HOW TO USE THIS

The Theta Window

Affirmations don't work because you say them. They work because of the state you are in when you say them.

Every day your brain passes through theta — a slow, dreamy brainwave state (around 4–8 Hz) that dominates the minutes as you drift off to sleep and the minutes right after you wake, before the fully alert mind takes over. In this window the critical, analytical filter goes quiet and the subconscious becomes deeply open and receptive to new input.

This is the moment to plant your affirmations — before the old programming boots up for the day, or right as it powers down for the night. You are speaking directly to the part of the mind that actually runs the show.

On Waking

The first few minutes after you open your eyes — before you reach for your phone.

Before Sleep

The last few minutes as you drift off, letting each line be the final thing on your mind.

Read slowly. Feel each line as already true. Repeat what resonates.
